PDF Page Cutting Explained: To break PDF pages into multiple pieces, it is important to understand the basics of PDF documents. You can read more about PDF files on Wikipedia. PDF files, are composed of streams that consist of information needed to display a document. Like a conventional file, streams can be divided into objects. You can think of an object as a chunk of data. All streams in a PDF file have some sort of objects. Since PDF files don't allow any editing of the information, and only allow you to display it, information has to be saved using a very specific order. PDF files are laid out as a series of pages. Each page is composed of an ordered set of objects, which create the pages, paragraphs and lines within a page. The object order is very important because if a page is opened with a specific order, the next page will open in the same order. Let's say you have two PDF files, and the first is a list of names and phone numbers. The second PDF file is a cover letter for a job application. When a user loads the cover letter, it would like to open the first PDF, since the cover letter is part of the first file. However, if the file was opened in a random order, the user would find the cover letter on the last page of the file. This is why you need to save PDF files in the same order as they appear in the file. 1. Select the PDF files you want to cut Double-click the first PDF file. You can see the PDF displayed in the right pane. 2. Select the Pages you want to break into multiple pieces Select the pages you want to cut, using the drop-down menu. 3. Configure the Page Cut Settings Use the Page Cut Settings to configure what you want to do with the cut file. The PDF files you have selected will be displayed on the left pane. To configure the settings, click on the page title. A smaller window will pop-up. Use the drop-down menu f3e1b3768c
