Roblox is a sandbox video game creation platform where users can create games, play other user-created games, and engage with other players. In Roblox, users can design their own worlds, software, and games in a 3D environment. Users can create games, worlds, and software by programming using a Lua-based, object-oriented scripting language. Players control in-game characters using a game controller (or through computer simulation). In Roblox, players can access a database of millions of user-created assets, which consist of player-built objects like furniture, weapons, vehicles, and characters. All player-created content is shared using a social networking service. Roblox also includes a virtual currency that players use to purchase in-game items, called Robux. Yes. I personally know of one Robux manager that has bots at the moment. There's also a new method of generating Robux in the last few days by requesting friends for blue cards. On Roblox, there's an option where you can invite friends for gems. You can add those friends for a limited time to join your account and play with you. This basically means that you're using your friends list for your account. This can be a fun way to get free robux. You can also do some online searches for 'free robux sites' or 'free robux online'. There are plenty of them that you can do if you're willing to put the work in to find them. Yes, you are allowed to request friends. However, there are limits to doing so. As far as I know, there are no restrictions that would prevent you from requesting friends. In that case, why would you even want to use the request friends feature? You can go to a site like to play.roblox.com. It is free to sign up and you can use your built in bank to play anything you want for free. This includes Robux. You are allowed to request friends. The only restriction is that you can request friends for 1 hour at a time. That means that you have to wait 1 hour between each request. You can only request friends once per account. If you do so again, the request will not work. If you want to request friends, you have to choose which room that you want to request them. If you want to have more robux at a time, you can request friends for blue cards. If you do so, you will automatically be included in a blue card group. You can play with your friends at that point. I do this myself to get robux more easily. I have over 100 friends at all times. You can play on that tab with your friends. This allows you to use their robux. It is free robux, as it should be. To add friends, you can click on the 'Manage friends' tab on the right-hand side. This will pull down an option to invite friends for gems. Choose any room you like for this. I've never had a problem with this, but you should be fine to do this. If there is a problem, post it here, so we can help
